NAZI KILLS POLE, WAR CRISIS GRIM

DANZIG, July 20 (AP)—The killing of a Polish soldier near the Daniz frontier village of Postelau this forenoon suddenly increased tension between the Free City and Poland.

Poles charged that the Polish soldier, Vitold Budziewicz, was shot by a Danzig border official on Polish soil.

Free City authorities said the Danzig customs officer, Max Stein, had fired in self-defense.

Officials told widely differing stories of the incident, which created great excitement at the office of the Polish commissioner in Danzig.

The account of authorities of the Nazified Danzig government was that Stein, while patrolling near the Polish-Danzig frontier, saw a man on a bicycle riding toward him from Poland with a rifle slung over his shoulder.

At the border, Danzigers said, the man dismounted, raised the rifle to his shoulder and released the safety catch as he aimed at the Danzig official.

Stein asserted he shot the Pole in self-defense.

Danzig authorities said they were not certain the Pole was dead, but the Polish commissioner's office reported Budziewicz died a few minutes after he collapsed at the frontier.

The Polish version was that a Danzig customs officer and two men in Danzig storm troopers' uniforms approached the border and, without warning, shot Budziewicz, who was several yards within the Polish side.

Poles described the incident as "inexcusable provocation."

The Polish commissioner, Marian Chodacki, conferred with Danzig Senate officials while both sides were receiving reports from the scene of the shooting, on the Free City district's southern frontier.

As the incident occurred, the Nazi-controlled Danzig Senate was preparing for conscription of men and wealth and taking further

TROOPS JOIN HUNT FOR BOY LOST ON MAINE MOUNTAIN

MILLINOCKET, Me., July 20—Maine national guardsmen joined police, game wardens, lumbermen and bloodhounds today in the search for 12-year-old Donn Fendler of Rye, N. Y., lost on the lofty heights of Mt. Katahdin.

Governor Lewis O. Barrows, in San Francisco, Cal., for "Maine Day" at the Golden Gate Exposition, ordered Millinocket's Company I, 103d Infantry, Maine National Guard, to the scene after Millinocket selectmen communicated with him.

The guardsmen rolled out of town soon after daybreak with full equipment and set up headquarters at Roaring Brook, below Chimney Pond, in the mountain area where other searchers were based.

The 62 men and four officers then entered the mountain thicket seeking trace of the lad, missing since Monday.

Two bloodhounds, brought here from New York State, were taken up the Hunt trail, from which the boy strayed, to resume the search where two Maine dogs quit yesterday at "Saddle Slide," a 400-foot steep precipice.

At a base camp, the boy's father, tired and worn by the tension of the search, held to slim hopes his son would be found alive.

"I'm trying to make myself believe there's still a thread of hope," he said.

Veteran mountain climbers now have little hope that the boy could have survived the freezing temperatures, even if he escaped the fall from the precipice.

The youth was dressed in summer underclothing, light pants and a slip-on sweater, had no food.

All Train Service On Narrow Gauge Due to Halt Oct. 1

After 65 years of existence, the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railway—the Narrow Gauge—is ready to throw up the sponge, it was revealed today.

Attorney Samuel Hoar of Concord and Boston, counsel for the road, notified the Public Utilities Commission of his intent to file a petition for discontinuance of service effective Oct. 1, 1939.

The road, which renders its principal service to thousands of commuters in Lynn, Revere and Winthrop, also revealed that the Point Shirley Street Railway Company in Winthrop intends to abandon its short line bus service at the same time.

400 TO LOSE JOBS

The joint abandonment would throw about 400 employes out of work, and would affect the interests of thousands of commuters, many of whom banded together and voted a contribution of $15,000 to the operating costs of the road last March. The money was to be matched by the road's employes and the operating company.

Since 1937 the railroad, which operates four ferries in addition to the trains over its 13-mile route, most of which is paralleled by the Boston & Maine, has been in serious financial difficulties, Hoar reported.

In July of that year directors of the road, unable to meet bond interest payments, petitioned in bankruptcy under Section 77 B of the federal bankruptcy act.

At that time a rehabilitation plan was proposed which would have combined the Winthrop sections of the railroad with the Boston Elevated, providing for elimination of the ferry service, and operations of Elevated trains to a terminal near the East Boston Airport.

COURT KILLED PLAN

This plan, although it fitted in with a general recommendation for coordination of the Greater Boston rapid transit system by providing for continuous rapid transit service direct from Winthrop into Boston, was killed after a survey showed it to be economically unsound.

The survey, ordered by federal court, suggested then that the line be abandoned in favor of a bus line, but trustees off the railroad continued theier fight to keep it alive.

Attempts to curtail service and raise fares, however, met with determined opposition in Winthrop and Revere, and trial for a 12 per cent wage cut in 1938 was killed by the Railroad Carmen's Union.

Members of the Public Utilities Commission, whose consent is necessary before the road and the bus line can be abandoned, said they expected Hoar's petition to be filed before August 1. Thirty days notice will be given, they announced, before public hearings are held on the proposal.

At the hearings, crystalized public sentiment against discontinuing the Narrow Gauge service is expected to result in mass protest, particularly by Winthrop residents who have fought every curtailment of service, and who voted the $15,000 contribution to operating costs. Two issues of the railroad's bonds of $1,000,000 each are currently quoted at five and two respectively, on a par value of 100.

2 Held in $7500 After Cafe Battle

Two men were held in $7500 each in United States district court here today and prosecution of a dozen other persons, including a blonde "mystery" girl, impended, as aftermath of a wild South End cafe riot, in which three federal officers were attacked and beaten.

The attack was characterized by Assistant U. S. Attorney William T. McCarthy as "most flagrant in years," a "direct challenge to federal authority and organized government."

FACE HEAVY PENALTIES

McCarthy said G-men were making full investigation of circumstances surrounding the fracas and a move would be made to close the cafe on the ground it is a "rendezvous for men ad women who are social undesirables."

The arrested men, Walter Hyatt, a waiter, and Daniel Galiano, cashier of the cafe, were charged with felonious assault on United States deputy marshals in pursuit of their duty.

If found guilty, they face a maximum penalty of $5000 fine and three years in a federal penitentiary.

Arraignment of the two defendants was before U. S. Commissioner Howard W. Robbins in a crowded Federal building courtroom.

Love-Crazed Kidnaper Held in Bail of $11,200

NORTHAMPTON, July 20—Vowing undying love for the woman who divorced him, and declaring he would always consider her "his mate," James J. Kehoe, 24-year-old ex-convict, today was held in $11,200 bail on charges of kidnaping his ex-wife, armed robbery, larceny and carrying a revolver.

Still protesting that he could have won his wife back "if I had had a steady job and a little money," Kehoe pleaded innocent in district court here, and was remanded to Hampshire County jail in lieu of bail.

He appeared calm as he faced court on charges growing out of a wild kidnap ride across the state yesterday, during which he forced his wife's second husband at gunpoint to drive the car.

SHE'S STAR WITNESS

Kehoe's former wife, who is now Mrs. Bernice Beckwith, 27, is expected to be one of the state's chief witnesses against the former husband who carried her off, then forced her to spend the night with him in a New Salem wilderness cabin.

She was not in court for the arraignment, nor was her new husband, Cyril Beckwith, who made a futile attempt to beat up Kehoe after the latter's capture.

After his arrest, the ex-convict tried to tell state police that he had "meant no harm," but was simply trying to recover the woman he regarded as still his "by moral right."

"MEANT NO HARM"

"I meant no one any harm," Kehoe allegedly told state police at the Northampton barracks.

"I guess I just made a mess of everything. I wanted to win my wife back because I will always consider we still are morally man and wife.

"I came to see her at Northampton twice in the hope I could get her back. The first time she wouldn't talk to me so I went away. But I love her so much that I came back, and I guess I lost my head.

"I never harmed her once. She will tell you that. I only asked her to come back to me but I guess her new husband has the edge because he has a steady job. If I only had a job and some money, I would have been able to win her back."

But there was no forgiveness on the part of the husband, who allegedly was forced at gunpoint to drive Kehoe and Mrs. Beckwith on the first part of the alleged abduction.

Beckwith rushed at Kehoe and

NUDIST RANCH DOOMED BY SUICIDE OF BEAUTY

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 20—Authorities here moved swiftly today to wipe out a Tunyas canyon nudist colony, alleged scene of a wild drinking party which ended with lovely, talented young Dawn Hope Noel, secret bride of a year, dead by her own hand.

She shot herself, according to police, after her handsome, sleek-haired husband, 36-year-old Band-leader Herbert "Jimmy" Noel, had "bawled out" a man acquaintance in a fit of jealousy.

Declaring "alcohollam and nudism don't mix," Captain Dalton Patton, chief of the Los Angeles police homicide bureau, said he was determined to put an end to "drinking going on up in that canyon with men and women running around unclad."

Meantime, social, theatrical and motion picture circles here and in New York were shocked by news of the tragic end of golden-haired 19-year-old Hope Dawn Noel's once promising career.

If she killed herself, as police believed, she followed a sad example set by her own mother, the family's many friends recalled.

BROODED OVER MOTHER

For Hope Dawn was the daughter of Broadway's one-time reigning favorite, dramatic actress Adele Blood. And Adele Blood put a bullet through her brain in New York in 1936. Her body was found on the grounds of the swanky Westchester Golf Club.

Then only 16, Hope Dawn was shocked and stunned by her mother's suicide. She brooded over it for months. She was never the

Raymond Massey's Ex-Wife Weds New Wife's Ex-Mate

LONDON, July 20—A wife-swap in theatrical circles was revealed today when Adrienne Allen, British actress whose former husband, Raymond Massey, stage and screen star, last week married Mrs. Dorothy Whitney, married Mrs. Whitney's former husband, William Dwight Whitney, New York lawyer.

Miss Allen, born 32 years ago at Manchester, and Whitney were married at the Chanctonbury register office, Storrington, Sussex.

Massey, best known for his characterization of Abraham Lincoln, and Mrs. Whitney were married July 10 in New York. It was Massey's third marriage.

Miss Allen's two children, Daniel and Anna Massey, and her mother attended today's ceremony, for which the register office was decorated with roses.

The couple left on a wedding trip. Paris was reported their destination.

It has been only a few days since both the Masseys and the Whitneys were divorced.

The former Mrs. Whitney, now Mrs. Massey, obtained an uncontested decree in Minden, Nev., on July 14, 1937. She charged cruelty.

Two years and a day later she was married to Massey, English actor who at that time was the star of the Broadway play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." They now have gone to Hollywood, where Massey will play the role in a motion picture.

Adrienne Allen and Massey were divorced in Reno on July 6.

The Whitneys have long been socially prominent in New York. They had two children, Margaret Dwight, now seven, and Dorothy Myrtle, now three. Custody of the children and property rights were arranged in a written agreement.

Whitney is a graduate of Yale and of Oxford University. His practice now is confined toe orporation law.

CHILDREN STAGE PROTEST OVER POLLUTED BEACHES

A march of children on the State House and the assessment of $1500 in federal fines today marked the drive for a cleanup of Boston harbor and nearby beaches.

Boston Evening American Photo

HOSPITAL FIRE—Forced to flee Central Hospital, Somerville, scene of a two-alarm fire, was Jean Hennessey, 8 (above), along with other patients. Smoke from stubborn rubbish fire in the basement poured through the building, with nurses and firemen moving patients to escape the stifling fumes, and as precaution against fire spreading.

More than two score children deprived of bathing facilities by the closing of Avalon Beach appeared before the ways and means committee at the hearing on legislation to clean up the harbor, as two Italian steamship officers were fined $750 each in federal court.

SHIP OFFICERS FINED

The ways and means committee is conducting hearings on legislation to spend $24,700,000 on cleaning up the harbor and providing sewage disposal plants which would end the practice of dumping raw sewage into the water, for which pollution the city of Boston is liable to federal fines of $2500 a day.

The cleanup drive, started a year ago by the Boston Evening American with an analysis survey of the harbor and nearby waters, was strongly supported by United States Attorney Edmund J. Brandon, who announced that Federal authorities will rigidly enforce the law against ships' dumping oil sludge in the harbor.

Two officers of the Italian steamer Capo Olmo were haled into federal court during the day and pleaded guilty to oil pollution charges.

They were Captain Benedicto Sturla and Chief Engineer Joachino Labassa. They were accused by Deputy Customs Collector Thomas F. Finnegan of the enforcement division. Each was fined $750 by Judge Francis W. Ford.

CHILDREN IN PROTEST

Oil pollution, which produces a scum on the water dangerous to bathers, and fatal to water birds, was reported cause of the closing of Avalon Beach by Quincy health authorities.

Because of the bathing ban there, children at the Avalon Beach playground have been forced to swim in abandoned quarries, Miss Margaret Morin, playground instructor, told the Ways and Means Committee.

This practice, she said, is dangerous. With her at the hearing were 55 Quincy children, come to plead for legislation to make possible the return of the open water bathing they formerly enjoyed.

Senator Harris S. Richardson of Winchester, chairman of the committee which investigated conditions after this newspaper's expose last summer, told the committee that projects recommended by the investigating commission will cost $24,700,000.

"We believe that now is the time for definite action," declared the Senator.

"These projects are looked upon with favor by federal authorities, and we feel certain that Congress will pass legislation which will allow us to receive grants which will pay 45 per cent of the cost."

Senator Richardson said the average bacillus coli count in the Charles river is more than nine times that considered dangerous to bathers.

Eastern Mass. to Buy Buses, Extend Service

FALL RIVER, July 20 (AP)—Edmond T. Talbot, a trustee of the Eastern Massachusetts Street railway, announced today the road would expend between $66,000 and $78,000 for motor buses to be used on the Fall River-Boston route.

At the same time, Talbot announced the road had been granted authority to extend its run from Fall River to Ashmont directly into Park square, Boston, and added that runs would be made every two hours daily from 6:30 a. m. to 11:30 p. m.

Girl Who Tried To Drown Finds New Friends

Motherless, fatherless, thinking herself alone in the world, Ann McClellan rested today in City hospital, muttering incoherently, unable to explain her desperate leap into Fort Point channel.

Suffering from shock and the after effects of near-drowning, the girl was on the danger list, while two true friends who read of her act were ending her fears of loneliness.

Refusing to leave their names, a man and a woman visited the girl during the morning, but she was unable to recognize them.

Police ende their investigation of the case, when they checked the girl's adress on Park drive.

After writing a farewell note, the McClellan girl made her way from the Back Bay to the side of the channel, near Sleeper street under the Northern avenue bridge.

Boston Jews Picket British Consulate

Bearing placards scoring the "power policy" of the British government, nearly 100 Jewish men, women and children today picketed the British consulate in Postoffice square in protest against England's new restriction on Jewish immigration into Palestine.

"Chamberlain betrayed our Jewish homeland," "Open Palestine for Jewish Refugees," and "British Consulate, We Plead for Fair Play," the signs read.

The action, which was organized by the Zionist movement, organization for development of a Jewish national home in the ancient land of biblical history, was part of a simultaneous demonstration at British consulates throughout the United States.

Among pickets were a dozen Jewish boy and girl Zionist scouts who hitch-hiked here from Bridgewater. The march was led by Max Lefkowitz, representing Poale Zion, and Mrs. Bessie Albert.

Virtually every Jewish organization in Boston was represented, but the demonstration lasted only about half an hour, when police told the marchers they must have permits to picket.

Referring to Palestine as "the Jewish national home," a statement issued by the committee for the demonstrators declared that in a time of their need the British government "because of power politics" had betrayed the beleaguered people, pushed from European pillar to Asiatic post in an effort to find sanctuary.

The statement, alluding to the now famous Balfour agreement, accused the British of violating "sacred agreements entered into before the eye of all the world."

"Every decent American will denounce this action of the Chamberlain government," declared the committee, declaring its protest was registered "in the name of fair play."

New England's perfect vacation weather, source of enjoyment for thousands of visitors from all parts of the United States, today was threatening the area's farmers with serious crop damage.

With July rainfall sharply below normal, and no relief in sight, next week's weather was expected to determine whether crops will survive.

"The damage is still mostly potential," declared an official of the New England Crop Reporting Service. "It's mostly a question now of whether we'll get some rain before we get more hot weather."

Only .58 of an inch of rainfall has been recorded by the Weather Bureau during the month, as opposed to normal precipitation of 1.83 inches to the present date.

"PITFALLS" AHOY!—Following warning of Michigan's governor, Lauren D. Dickinson, comely Wills Sheridan, "Miss Michigan Aviation," deliberately searches for New York's "dens of sin." Her dance with Laurence Baker, Jr., in Gotham night club, however, seems harmless enough.

Murphy Denounces Dickinson's Speech

WASHINGTON, July 20 (INS)—Attorney General Murphy branded today "indefensible and absolutely unjust" remarks by Governor Lauren D. Dickinson of Michigan in which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's name was linked to drinking habits.

At his press conference, Murphy said:

"Mrs. Roosevelt does not need to have anyone speak for her. She's the most interesting and useful of all first ladies in history.

"I believe her social responsibility and matchless industry for action and her sense of tolerance is an inspiration to all the young people of this country."

Murphy is a former governor of Michigan.

Discussing Dickinson's remarks, the attorney general said, "only a combination of reactionary politicians and bigots could spawn a thing of that kind and use him (Dickinson) to do it."

Murphy defended Dickinson as an "earnest and honest public official" and as one who "ought not to be misunderstood."

"Anyone who knows him and is responsible knows he is a man of integrity and is deadly earnest—his views ought to be respected," he added. "However, his statement last night over the radio I think is indefensible and absolutely unjust."

Questioned about a movement started last week to recall Dickinson as governor, Murphy said:

"I'd consider it very unfortunate, I don't believe any recall movement ought to be started against Dickinson. He is an earnest and honest public official."

HINTS 1ST LADY SET DRINKING 'FORMULA'

LANSING, Mich., July 20 (AP)—Gov. Luren Dickinson of Michigan said in a radio address here that women he saw drinking liquor without becoming intoxicated at a "high life" party in New York may have "learned the formula advised by a prominent lady of our nation" just before repeal of prohibition.

He told newsmen the "prominent lady" was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, but she was not mentioned by name in the address.

The 80-year-old Governor and veteran dry leader said this "prominent lady" addressed to "young girls who would avoid being called prigs" the following statement:

"'The average girl of today faces the problem of learning very much how much she can drink of such things as whiskey, gin and so forth and sticking to the proper quantity.'"

Mrs. Roosevelt delivered a radio speech December 9, 1932, in which she said that in her youth a girl was not branded as a prig or being unsocial if she did not join in whatever drinking was going on, "but prohibition seems to have changed that to a certain extent."

Governor Dickinson, outlining what he termed the danger to young girls in "high life" associations, related three cases he said were taken from a report of a vice investigation commission. He said:

"One, a Sunday school girl, was induced to go to a fashionable party with one whom she had known but a few hours. He offered her a drink, of which he pretended not to know what it was.

"Awakening the next morning to full realization, wanting to get away, she again was trapped by a motherly appearing lady, dressed richly, and taken to her home, but her home proved to be Hell.

"Another equally as innocent was offered a ride home from the theater and on the way was given liquors and before the trip was finished she was a ruined girl.

"Another, unsuspicious and innocent of high-life practices, was paired with a stranger at the banquet table.

"His pleasing appearance and pleasant words caused her to consent to go to the ballroom alone. They drank soon she was in his arms and the same result followed as with the other two."

GIRL SOCIALITE HELD IN HIT-RUN

SOUTHBRIDGE, July 20—Socially prominent 21-year-old Audrey "Giddy" Gray of Locust Valley, N. Y., was arrested here today and turned over to Putnam, Conn., police after a hit and run accident which cost a 14-year-old victim his left arm and critically injured his 10-year-old brother.

Even as doctors in Day Kimball hospital in Putnam were amputating the youngster's arm, Miss Gray was being held here without bail on a reckless driving charge.

Police said she signed a statement admitting she had struck the boys as they were riding along the road on their way to a fishing hole. She said, according to police, the bicycle veered into the path of her car, and that she drove on, believing the boys unhurt.

DAMAGED CAR

Doctors said both were critically injured.

Police Capt. Leo Dubois said Miss Gray was charged with evasion of responsibility as well as with reckless driving. Her car, he declared, had a broken right front headlight, a dented right front door, a dented rear fender and a bloody door handle—mute witnesses, according to police, to the force with which it struck the two youthful accident victims.

The victims were Wilfred Martineau, Jr., 14, and his brother Gerard, 10. The younger lad failed to recover consciousness after the accident and, several hours after the accident, doctors gave him little chance to survive.

SAVED BOY'S LIFE

Miss Gray was arrested half an hour after the accident by Deputy Wilfred H. Dumas, who halted her car in Southbridge in response to telephone messages initiated by a Putnam man who saw the accident.

Doctors gave two Danielson men, Wilfred Oldham and Charles Adams, credit for saving the older boy's life. They said they found Gerard unconscious and Wilfred bleeding badly from a cut left arm, to which they applied a tourniquet.

Walsh Fights to Keep 'Old Ironsides' Here

Senator David I. Walsh, chairman of the Senate naval affairs committee, today assumed leadership in the fight against the plan sponsored by President Roosevelt to take the U. S. S. Constitution and other historic naval vessels from their present home ports and anchor them in the Potomac river as supplementary exhibits to a planned naval museum in the nation's capital.

The senator began organizing members of Congress in other eastern seaboard states to defeat the measure proposed by Representative Cochran, whose Missouri home is far from salt water.

Included in the measure, besides Boston's Constitution, are the Constellation, hero ship of the short-lived war with France in 1799; the Hartford, Admiral Farragut's flagship; the Olympia, flagship of Admiral Dewey at Manila, and the yacht America, first winner of the America's Cup.

Most violent opposition to the President's proposal has been aroused in Boston, particularly in Charlestown, where a spirit not unlike that which routed the Redcoats at Lexington and Concord has boiled up at the thought of losing the city's historical maritime pride.

Bostonians feel that Boston school children bought the Constitution when they showered down pennies to rehabilitate the gallant old frigate, after Washington had announced its impending destruction.

The city stepped in as saviour of the old oak floating fortress at the very first, when a public response to Oliver Wendell Holmes' famous poem, "Old Ironsides," provided funds for her first rebuilding.

VATICAN CITY, July 20 (AP)—A young Indo-Chinese empress clad in trousers paid her respects today to Pope Pius in a ceremonial audience accorded those of royal rank.

The Pope received Empress Marie N'Guyen Houhao of Annam, 23-year-old Catholic consort of the Buddhist Emperor Bao Dai. Annam is a French protectorate in Indo-China.

The Empress appeared in native costume, wearing white silk trousers, red slippers, yellow jacket embroidered with a golden imperial dragon and a yellow cap.

CALL WPA PROTEST MEETING

Because of continuing lay-offs at the rate of 1000 a day in Massachusetts, a group of WPA workers in Boston called for a protest mass meeeting to be held late today outside the New England regional headquarters, 600 Washington street.

Similar meetings were called throughout the country by the Workers Alliance, WPA union, whose leaders have urged workers to stop work and stage demonstrations on this date.

Extra police details held in readiness for any trouble in the city, when reports were received that workers may attempt to stage protests at various WPA projects.

Layoff notices were sent from WPA headquarters yesterday to 3,000 employes in Massachusetts in accordance with orders from Washington to cut the total of workers from 97,000 to 84,000 by the first of August.

Another 14,000 must be dropped in August, to complete the slash of 27,000 required by the new relief act. More than 650,000 workers will be dismissed throughout the country.

In Washington, Senator David I. Walsh pointed out that the lay-offs are chiefly temporary and that by winter many of those employes now being dropped will be eligible to return to WPA if they have not found private employment.

Report Only Few Quit For WPA Demonstration

(By the Associated Press)

Incomplete reports indicated that few workmen left their WPA jobs today in the national demonstration called by the Workers' Alliance.

There were disputed figures in New York and other cities, but most WPA officials over the country said work was going on normally.

In Washington President David Lasser of the Alliance said it would be two days before "we get the whole picture" of how many took part.

The demonstration was called as a protest against the new relief act's requirement that all on WPA put in a 130-hour month and that persons on the rolls 18 months be furloughed to make room for new ones. The 130-hour requirement replaced the prevailing wage system.

Lt. Col. Brehon B. Somervell, WPA administrator in New York city, said a check had indicated no more than 4000 were going out there. Sam Weisman, alliance secretary, put the figure at more than 40,000.

CALLS ALL NEUTRAL LAWS EVIL

HANOVER, N. H., July 20 (AP) Branding the Bloom neutrality bill as a step toward dictatorship, William R. Castle, former undersecretary of state, declared today that what he feared in all forms of neutrality legislation was "the tendency to put more and more powers in the hands of the President."

Speaking before the Conference on Politics and the Public Conscience at Dartmouth College, Castle, the former ambassador to Japan, said:

"Whoever the President may be at a particular time has, theoretically, nothing to do with the matter. He has tremendous powers under the Constitution, especially in time of war, and I do not want to take away one of those powers, because they are essential to the prompt and efficient conduct of war.

"But equally surely, I do not want to add to those powers other powers which are those of a dictator. If the so-called Bloom bill should be enacted into law, it would give the President the authority to get us into war without reference to Congress. This would be the final degradation of Congress.

"It would really mark the setting up of an American dictatorship, and the moment we have such a government we lost our share, as free citizens, in guilding the destinies of our country."

James F. Green, a member of the research staff of the Foreign Policy Association, declared "that proposals giving the President power to name an aggressor and to discriminate between belligerents are highly unwise, for they in effect mean a transfer of the war-declaring power from Congress."

Dr. Pound Lays Unrest To 'Cult of Power'

SAN PEDRO, Calif., July 20 (AP)—A "cult of power" in the opinion of Dr. Roscoe Pound, former dean of Harvard's law school, has made the law in Europe "whatever is done officially."

"I am firmly of the opinion that France and Britain, who still desire to mentor the destinies of Europe, are just as guilty of the development of this situation as Germany, Italy and Japan."

King Carol Going To Turkey and Greece

BUCHAREST, July 20 (AP)—King Carol, to combine diplomatic business with vacation pleasure on a cruise starting tonight, will go first to Istanbul for talks with Ismet Inonu, president of Turkey.

From Turkey the royal yacht will carry the king to Greek waters, where it was expected he would talk with General John Metaxas, premier of Greece.

SEEPAGE FILLING UP SQUALUS

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 20 (AP)—Concentrating the first stage of the salvage work on the forward section of the sunken submarine Squalus, divers prepared today to make the necessary connections for putting the bow compartments under pressure to ease seepage.

The divers who got down yesterday managed to open valves into the control room and the forward battery compartments—first stage of the plan—and by taking the pressure inside the $4,000,000 craft, still a tomb of 26 men, operators aboard the rescue ship Falcon determined the control room and battery compartment were about three-fifths full of water, compared with half full last week.

Divers also attached a hose to the forward torpedo room to replace one ripped loose when the Squalus came away from its "elevator" a week ago and plunged to the bed, 240 feet down, a second time. Pressure will be built up in the room, salvage experts said.

An outbreak of colds among divers impeded the work somewhat, six divers being forced to come up before reaching the Squalus' deck and three others being prevented from putting on suits.

DISPUTES NEW HAVEN RAIL CLAIM

Charles W. Dow, railroad expert for the state, today disputed the claim of New Haven railroad trustees that the month of October, 1937, was a representative month as to revenues and expenses.

At a continued hearing on the railroad's move to abandon 88 stations on the Old Colony division, he said October, 1937, was not representative, in that the operation of 186 trains was different than set up in the basic study by New Haven railroad experts, based on that month.

Dow's testimony at previous hearings showed the East End territory was charged with all the expenses of operation of an additional 33,412 cars. This comparison was made on a train-to-train study, and did not include some trains whose numbers had been changed.

The New Haven trustees maintained the variance between Dow's figures and those of the railroad's experts was occasioned by failure to include the trains whose numbers had been changed.

Assistant Attorney-General Edward A. Peece, who is conducting the state's case against the railroad, has demanded a list of trains whose numbers had been changed and on failure of the railroad's attorneys to produce the list today, Peece made a motion to compel them to supply it. This motion was taken under advisement by the utilities commission.

Clerk Hits Sour High With $16 Worth of Pickles

INDIANAPOLIS, July 20 (AP)—An official of Riverside Amusement Park gave Albert Sanders, an employe, a $20 bill and told him to get $20 worth of nickels from stores at the next corner.

Sanders came back lugging several buckets of dill pickles.

"I could only get $16 worth of pickles," he apologized. "I'll have to go some place else to buy the other $4 worth."

The Boston American-Record-Sunday Advertiser Candid Camera Cavalcade will be in the downtown shopping area today, so watch out and look pleasant for they may snap your picture.

Revere Beach was the happy hunting ground for amusement bargain seekers yesterday, and it was the happy hunting ground for the Boston Evening American and Daily Record's Candid Camera Cavalcade, too.

It was Nickel Day, and of course, Record-American readers were out in full force.

The Candid Camera men wanted to see the fun, too, and get a photo-record of it, so they covered Revere Beach, as well as Boston.

They want to catch you working, they want to catch you shopping, and they want to catch you having fun.

Remember, though, the lens sees you before you see it, so keep smiling.

You'll know the Candid Camera Man by the insignia on his hope. After he snaps you, he will hand you a card telling you what's happening to you — and your picture may be in the Boston American, the Boston Record, or the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday, or any day after that.

If your likeness appears among the few which will be published each day, you will receive a handsome sepia (even by nine-inch enlargement of the picture.

Bare Death Threat To Bridges Witness

ANGEL ISLAND, Cal., July 20 (INS)—During the closely-guarded hearing of deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges at isolated Angel Island, a government witness against Bridges received a threat against his life.

This sensational episode in the Bridges case, which had been hushed up by authorities, was learned by International News Service today, as U. S. Department of Labor sleuths sought additional protection from the San Francisco police for their witnesses.

Aaron Sapiro

The witness threatened in the hearing room was John J. Leppold, ex-union official dubbed by his enemies as "Red Baiter No. 1 of the San Francisco Waterfront." He had linked Bridges in testimony with the Communist party.

SAPIRO'S BLAST

Meanwhile, the hearing continued with keen-witted Aaron Sapiro, nationally famed labor lawyer, on the stand with defense attorneys trying to blast his damaging testimony against Bridges, Australian-born West Coast CIO director.

Details of the threat against Leppold were revealed by Edgar Inspector-in-Charge Page San Francisco plainclothesman assigned to the hearing.

Page said a known beef squad member possessed of a long police record gained admittance to the room by using the press pass as signed by a radical labor paper.

The only "outsiders" in attendance are 18 newsmen. Since the Leppold threat, authorities have placed a "double check" on newspapermen permitted to loaf at Angel Island.

FRIGHTENED WITNESS

"Two days ago," Inspector Page related, "this beef squad member, who was sent out from New York city, eased his way to Leppold in the crowded hearing room and said, 'Take it easy or—' Leppold later said he was scared. No wonder he was so shaky on the stand."

The reporter made his first and only appearance the day Leppold testified. Page said he had kept him spotted throughout his stay on the island but that Leppold did not receive the threat until several hours after the day's session.

Sapiro proved to be the biggest gun for the government, to date.

He linked Bridges with a Communist plot to seize the government [illegible] force and violence.

F. D. R. Blast at Press Recalls T. R. Attack

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN
(Special to Boston Evening American)

WASHINGTON, July 20—In view of Mr. Roosevelt's increasing irritation at the press—as illustrated by his recent denunciation of the United Press, for an alleged offense against good reporting that was relatively unimportant, if indeed it was an offense at all—one shudders to contemplate what his state of mind would be as a candidate running for a third term.

Already there is evidence of a growing [illegible] in the country at large [illegible] the move proposed [illegible] being a serious attempt to break down the tradition, the unwritten law established by George Washington a century and a half ago.

If Mr. Roosevelt has made up his mind to try to break that unwritten law [illegible] and of all the Constitution itself, and of all tradition, he is heading [illegible] a campaign of unparalleled bitterness.

It must be conceded of the President, however, that although doubtless he is becoming increasingly irritated by the newspapers, in the incident of the crack-down on the United Press he conducted himself with far greater restraint than another President—also a Roosevelt—was able to muster in the case involving an unfair newspaper story.

It is generally assumed that F. D. R.'s blast at the U. P. was [illegible] without precedent. So is not the fact.

Back in the old days a [illegible] named Horace Vose, from Rhode Island used to send a big Thanksgiving turkey to the White House every year, and in 1904 the gobbler arrived per schedule.

There was an old-time newspaperman named Johnny Shriver in town at that time, whose failing was a perverted sense of humor.

Down at Shoomakers bar one night he reeled off a yarn to the effect that the two White House kids, Archie and Kermit, had stoned the turkey all over the place pulling out its feathers, and that T. R. stood on the back porch applauding their athletic efforts.

The correspondent of a Boston newspaper was out of Washington at the time, and his substitute swallowed this preposterous tale and wired it. The paper published it.

President Roosevelt was incensed, and as he had a feud on with Henry Loomis Nelson, then the editor of the paper, he concluded the story, which was, of course, false in every particular, had been planted by design. But this wasn't so.

Well what did T. R. do? By executive order he deprived [illegible] of all access to departmental news. And he made [illegible] stick, too.

LEND BILL CHANGES RUSHED

WASHINGTON, July 20 (INS)—President Roosevelt's new $3,460,000,000 lending program underwent drastic overhauling today to forestall prolonged opposition in the Senate which threatened to block [illegible] of Congress.

[illegible] of many of the controversial features and even of its name, the bill was placed before the full Senate banking committee for final consideration before it goes to the Senate floor for debate.

The [illegible] dodge [illegible] dropped [illegible] of the President's proposal which drew criticism [illegible] who declared that the loans were [illegible] if [illegible] features were removed.

[illegible] leaders of the [illegible] to determine the [illegible] on the bill. Senate G. O. P. leader McNary of Oregon said the Republicans would [illegible] passage of the bill if [illegible] features were removed.

If the [illegible] could suitable McNary predicted [illegible] a week which would permit adjournment by the date which Congress [illegible] passed.

Under the [illegible] son of the lending program, the name of the bill was changed to the Works Finance Act. The new theory of the administration committee members [illegible] the program [illegible] Works rather than [illegible] loans.

MINISTER KIDNAPED BY ARABS

JERUSALEM, July 20 (AP) — C. R. Goldner, 29 year-old Akron, Ohio missionary, was reported by his father today to have been kidnaped by a band of Arabs near the Dead Sea for $100 ransom.

Cleveland Kin Told Victim Is Safe

CLEVELAND, July 20 (AP) — K. V. Ludlow, brother-in-law of Gerould R. Goldner, 29 Christian Church missionary reported kidnaped by Arabs near the Dead Sea, received a cablegram today from Dr. Jacob Goldner, the missionary's father, saying "Gerould is safe."

"The cablegram was sent from Jerusalem and signed 'Dad,'" said Ludlow. "It was the first word we had from him."

The younger Goldner's wife, Ruth Ada, and the couple's 10-months-old son, Russell, were at Ludlow's home when the three-word cablegram was received.

punched him before state police could drag him off.

"You haven't got a gun now," he shouted as he rained him with blows.

Kehoe was taken without a struggle and his ex-wife was rescued by state troopers on the tip of Trout Pond cabin owner.

State Troopers D. Francis Murphy and Edward Gibbons reported they found a revolver under the seat of the automobile in which Kehoe fled with his former wife.

The two were charged with conspiracy to hold up Beckwith and a companion, Leroy Langdon, just before the well known bandit trail in western Massachusetts began.

Beckwith and Longdon were forced out of the auto several hours later, while Kehoe continued on with Mrs. Beckwith, police charge.

STORY TO PROSECUTOR

District Attorney John W. Heselton announced that Kehoe told him he had been released from Concord Reformatory June 29 and had come to Northampton two weeks ago to plead with his ex-wife.

Troopers Gibbons and Murphy located Kehoe and his captive ex-wife in the New Salem cabin after they had talked with Ira Shattuck near the Pelham-Belchertown line. They said Shattuck directed them to the Red Top cabins when they asked where they could find tourist cabins.

Approaching the cabin, the troopers said, they found the Beckwith auto.

With drawn guns they approached the cabin and, when they were five feet distant, Kehoe shouted from within:

"I give up."

He surrendered without [illegible] and the couple started [illegible] and the ex-wife of Mrs. [illegible] back to Northampton.

The arrest of Kehoe was [illegible] a search which [illegible] extended to the mountains [illegible] into Canada, and in which Quebec had stood prepared to join in case [illegible]

"I think it is possible that one of the men drowned (attempting to escape) may have vomited and torn off his mouthpiece for that reason."

"Deputy Kruse was beaten to the floor and was then cuffed, punched, slugged and kicked by men and women both," McCarthy said.

"A young woman of bad reputation in the district encouraged the attackers and cheered them on."

After fixing bail for each of the defendants at $7500, U. S. Commissioner Robbins set August 14 as date for their hearing.

Asst. U. S. Atty. McCarthy said he might, "present the whole case to a federal grand jury."

Deputy U. S. Marshal Shannon, one of the officers who was attacked, told the Boston Evening American:

"It was a wild roughhouse. One of the things I remember most clearly was this young girl, a pretty blonde, egging on the fellows who jumped us.

"She kept yelling:

"'Give it to the — — — s! Sock 'em! Sock 'em!'"

"I don't think she realized we were officers.

"With me were Deputy Marshals Paul Skuse and Jack Watson.

"Things didn't quiet down until I finally got my gun out and fired a shot in the air.

"The trouble started after we went into the cafe to serve a civil writ for $805. It called for attachment of visible cash assets and we told the cashier of the cafe we'd have to take the cash register. He poured abuse on us and began swinging."

WOULD BAR RELIEF VOTE

'Peace' at Any Price For 'Castle Heaven'

NEWPORT, R. I., July 20—"Peace, it's wonderful"

And many a weary telephone operator, postal employe and messenger boy in this swank resort would like to get a little of it.

For Newport has been far from peaceful for those who serve the palatial estate, "The Castle," which Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman is trying her hardest to establish as a "heaven" for Harlem's Father Divine.

"Only too true," chortled the wealthy Mrs. Kaufman today as she dug deep into a batch of 11,000 letters and telegrams, interrupted constantly by the ringing telephone.

"But it's all in a good cause," she beamed. "Father Divine is coming within three weeks to save Newport from sin. It's going to be worth everything."

The plump widow had two major projects to complete today—to get a steamship to bring 2000 dark 'angels" of Father Divine to sit on her lawn and to get lumber and contractors to build bleachers to seat them.

"And I'll do it too," she added.

"But look at this. An offer of marriage from a man down in Hornsdale, Pa. Says he wants to marry me if I'll give him $5000 cash. Says his wife is in an asylum but is going to die soon and for me to wait for him.

"I should get married now!" she exclaimed. "There are much bigger matters to attend to here in Newport. Let's of these letters, scores of them, are offers of marriage. But they will have to wait until Father Divine saves Newport from sin."

Rescues 3 Children, Fourth Loses Life

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., July 20 (AP)—Three times Thomas Pohl, 30, dived into the Missouri river backwater near Richardson. Each time he came out with a child.

But he was too exhausted for a fourth attempt. Helplessly, he watched Virginia Starostka, 14, drown.

Charges Vice Conditions in Night Cabins

That a vice hazard exists in overnight cabins in lower Bristol county near the Massachusetts-Rhode Island state line was charged today in the State Senate by Senator Arthur F. Blanchard, Cambridge, during a debate on a bill to license tourist cabins.

Senator Blanchard maintained the situation was a problem for local police and that it was not necessary to pass a state-wide act in order to control condition in one community.

He was against the bill which would require cabin owners to be licensed [illegible] State department of public health.

Senator Jarvis Hunt, North Attleboro, urged passage of the bill, which he said is opposed by most cabin owners.

He also said a survey of eight groups of tourist cabins in his community made by the North Attleboro police revealed that 80 per cent of the automobiles parked at the cabins came from within a radius of 20 miles and that 50 per cent were registered to persons with criminal records.

$20,000 PROFIT

Patrick J. Holland, head of the construction company, who is now [illegible] on the witness stand a week, was [illegible] a profit of more than $20,000 on the contract.

Holland's own auditor yesterday backed up the statement of his employer.

Defense Counsel John L. Murphy contended the state auditors' income tax returns of the Lawrence contractor would reveal the similar profit.

Because of conflicting evidence of the auditors, the Internal Revenue officials are conducting an investigation to determine the true figures and whether proper returns were made.

MAY ASK EVIDENCE

According to State House reports the governor's council will demand that evidence beyond reasonable doubt be presented by Attorney Saltonstall if the removal of Callahan by the council is sought next Wednesday.

After two weeks of testimony on the first two of 14 charges brought against Callahan by a special investigating commission, the governor abruptly ended the hearing and asked attorneys for both sides to wind up the case tomorrow.

In a counter move, Councillor Daniel H. Coakley was reported ready to delay the ouster vote by urging the council to open public hearings of the charges of its own record.

Patty Berg Goes Under Knife

MINNEAPOLIS, July 20 (AP)—Patty Berg of Minneapolis, women's national golf champion, underwent an operation for appendicitis at Northwestern Hospital today and afterward was reported to be "resting comfortably."

The operation, it was indicated, will make it impossible for her to compete in the Women's Western Closed Tournament at Birmingham, Mich., August 7-12 and may prevent her from defending her national title at Noroton, Conn., two weeks later.

Miss Berg in 1938 was voted the nation's number one woman athlete in an Associated Press poll. This far this year she had won most of the events she entered.

WOMEN'S DRESSES and hats seem destined for regimentation in scarcity minded Nazi Germany.

Die Schwarze Korps, organ of the Black-shirt Guards, cries [illegible] and [illegible] gets the custom of [illegible] [illegible] solely for utility.

"German women should learn," the editors warn, "that one puts a garment aside when it is worn out or no longer is suited to her age—not when it becomes 'out of style.'"

BEAUTY AND VARIETY IN AMERICAN HATS
Even Boston Gentlemen Liked the Combination

[illegible] of China would interest these somber-garbed [illegible] and

[illegible] earliest times to the present day, the Chinese have [illegible] strictly to one kind of costume, the ruling classes [illegible] arraying themselves in rich fabrics as does Germany's [illegible], the bemedalled General Goering, and the rank and [illegible] people wearing the same rough textures their grand-[illegible] and great-grandparents wore.

And Chinese progress during the past thousand years has been about as much motion as an inland stream during a drouth.

Other nations, notably the United States, have taken a leaf from Nature's own book, have encouraged all their people to dress up and, as a result, have developed mentally and grown physically.

Particularly disturbing to the German "reformers" are present day hats.

"Why a woman is supposed to become more beautiful when she slaps such a monstrosity on her head," they sneer, "not a single one of the fashion experts has been able to reveal."

There are 4438 Bostonians who will not agree with that complaint.

They are the men who have visited City Hall this year and obtained licenses to wed women made more attractive by these intriguing new American chapeaux.

"THE CIGARETTE TAX," says Representative Frances X. Coyne of Dorchester, "is actually an attempt to assess the poor to maintain the poor."

"This proposed sales tax would affect the wage earners of Massachusetts most of all," he explains. "It would take from them money which otherwise would help to provide necessities for their families."

Sixty New England economists and educators who investigated levies of this kind a year ago and warned against them said substantially the same thing.

HAS MICHIGAN'S GOVERNOR, Lauren Dickinson, who deplores the "hellish perils" and "fatal pitfalls" awaiting youth in New York and the big cities of the East, overlooked crime facts in his own State?

WILMA SHERIDAN

The Wolverine territory, whence Mr. Dickinson hails, has more "human monsters" than 45 other States, according to the National Almanac's tabulation of police reports of 436 cities.

Only two States, South Dakota and Arizona, list higher percentages of offenses against women and young girls.

If Miss Wilma Sheridan, the comely young woman whom Governor Dickinson sent to the World's Fair as "Miss Michigan Aviation," visits Mayor LaGuardia, she will surely be told that there is little fear in the Metropolis, where criminals are quickly caught and effectively punished.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt —s— MY DAY

HYDE PARK, July 20—I have just read a little pamphlet called "Refugee Facts" a study of the German refugee in America issued by the American Friends Service Committee.

It is an interesting little pamphlet and some of the facts, I think will be new to many people, just as they were to me. For instance, did you know that under the N[illegible] [illegible] in 1924 and a [illegible] 774 immigrants [illegible] come to this [illegible] but of this number, Great Britain and Ireland have had as their quota, 83,574, and last year only 4,561 people came in under those quotas?

DURING THE PERIOD from 1932 through June, 1938, a total of 241,962 immigrants were admitted into the United States for permanent residence. During this same period 246,449 immigrants previously admitted to this country for permanent residence moved away so that roughly during the six years of the Nazi regime in Germany, 4,487 more aliens departed than were admitted to the United States.

Of course, of the number admitted, 50 per cent are not looking for employment, being children, under eighteen, married women or old people.

The items which interested me most, however, dealt with refugees admitted to the United States. They were the following:

"One German textile man used to own a shirt factory in Germany and sold his wares to South America. Having to leave his homeland, he has transferred his factory to our country and is employing American labor to supply his customers as before.

"Harmonicas and accordions used to be imported from Germany, now a refugee has set up a shop for the making of these instruments and American workers are making them.

"A German firm exported until recently certain types of wool hosiery to the United States. Now the three refugees who had owned this firm have re-established it in Massachusetts and are employing 38 American workers in the manufacture of goods which have been imported previously from abroad.

"Another refugee has brought over from Germany a patented process used in the manufacture of gloves. The firm he established to utilize this patent now does an annual business of $100,000."

SINCE no country prospers if its population is on the decline, the above facts seem to indicate that these immigrants will contribute to our well-being as have similar groups in our past history.

They seem to be, in the main, a group of valuable citizens.

I hope that you will obtain this pamphlet and read it in full, for I cannot give you in this short column all the facts it contains.

FIRST LADY CHATS WITH JACK BENNY
Raising Money to Aid Refugees Interests Them

Human Side of News —s— by EDWIN C. HILL

CLYDE BEATTY, that sinewy and slim young man who lies down with lions and persuades them to be lambs, has started a school. He means to teach other sinewy and slim young men how to go through the same hair-breadth performance and emerge laughingly—whole as to skin and pants.

He has opened the Clyde Beatty Lion-Taming School in Atlantic City. So now you can no longer safely say, "That's just the surf," when you hear a great roaring hard by the big Atlantic resort.

More likely it will be a four-legged African man-eater named Ethel jumping rebelliously through a hoop at the barking command of a Clyde Beatty pupil.

EVEN IN THE TIMES that are upon us it seems impossible that the lion-conquering Beatty could have found any pupils, but as a matter of fact he has found quite a few. Eleven signed up when school opened and ever since he has been saying "No" three or four times every day.

If he is a wise man Beatty says no more than "No," at least in the presence of his pupils. He ought not, for instance, to say a word about what happened to him in Peru, Indiana, one January evening in 1932. But the newspapers do.

"Nero," the newspapers tell us, "an African lion, attacked Clyde Beatty, wild animal trainer, last night and today Mr. Beatty is in the hospital, critically hurt. Nero bit Beatty on the leg and infection has already set in."

He should leave it to the newspapers to tell all about the time that black-maned Sampson knocked him across a 40-foot arena, broke three or four ribs and might well have broken the frail thread on which any lion tamer's life must hang, if a few assistants hadn't rushed up with chairs and prodding poles.

CLYDE BEATTY
Skilful Footwork Saves Him

THE ODDS, however, are that Beatty won't forget. He is almost certain to tell all, because it is his stubborn conviction that such stories go to show how safe his profession is. Practically, no danger at all, he insists; or at least very little, and less than that if your footwork is good.

Plenty of clear thinkers might sensibly choose to rely less on footwork than on a nice stout iron grill, but so far as Beatty is concerned footwork is the only essential. Watching his act you will notice that he never lets a lion or a tiger crowd him close to the wall of the cage in which he works. By skilful footwork he keeps out in the middle.

There with a whip, a revolver loaded with blanks, a chair and a few assistants safely outside the cage, he makes lions and tigers do things that any self respecting lion or tiger ought to be ashamed to do at the command of such a little fellow.

It provided for one 'chute to remain suspended in midair, with wax figures on the seat—as a boon to camera fiends . . . Robert Riskin recently left the employ of Sam Goldwyn to become associated with Frank Capra . . . Riskin told a group of friends that he was unhappy while working for Goldwyn. "All the publicity had to be about Goldwyn," he complained. "Goldwyn did this, Goldwyn did that—I received no publicity items at all" . . . "That's not true," one of his friends corrected. "I distinctly remember reading two items about you" . . . "Two?" asked Riskin. "What were they?" . . . "The first item was about your being hired," he was told "and the second—that you were fired."

Dainty Salad Decorations

By MARTHA LEE

A SALAD bowl of crisp lettuce and frosty cool watercress garnished with tomato wedges and green pepper rings is a popular "center attraction" on hot summer days.

When served with nippy cheese straws and deviled biscuits this kind of salad makes a satisfying meal. Iced coffee and tea are welcome during the warm weather and so are fresh fruit sherbets which pleasantly climax summer menus.

Besides tasting good with summer salads, cheese straws and deviled biscuits have filling qualities in their favor. Both are made with a minimum of effort and ingredients. The cheese straws may be made the day before they are served and stored in covered containers. The deviled biscuits are best when served hot. Since light foods are necessary in balanced menus even in midsummer, serving these tasty biscuits helps to solve the hot dish problem.

CRISP CHEESE STRAWS and deviled biscuits are tasty accompaniments for tetre[illegible] and vegetable salads on hot summer days.

DEVILLED BISCUITS

2 cups sifted flour
3 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
2 to 4 tbsp. shortening
2/3 to ¾ cup milk
1 cup ground cooked meat

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut in shortening. Add milk to make a soft dough. Toss on floured pastry cloth. Knead gently for ½ minute. Roll ¾ inch thick. Brush with melted butter and spread with ground cooked meat. Roll as for jelly roll and cut in one inch slices. Place on greased pan and bake in moderately hot oven (400 deg. F.) 12 to 15 minutes. (Deviled biscuits may be baked in greased muffin pans if desired.)

CHEESE STRAWS

1 cup sifted flour
1 tsp. salt
⅓ cup shortening
¾ cup grated sharp cheese
½ tsp. paprika
Dash of cayenne pepper
3 to 4 tbsp cold water

Sift flour and salt together. Add shortening and cheese. Cut and rub until thoroughly blended. Add paprika and cayenne. Add water gradually to make a stiff dough. Toss on lightly floured board and roll dough about ¼ inch thick. Cut into strips 1/3 inch by 3 inches, using a sharp knife or pastry wheel. Place on greased baking sheet in even rows and bake in hot oven (425 deg. F.) 10 to 12 minutes or until straws are a delicate brown. To "curl" cheese straws, curve them in a circle when they come out of the oven and are still hot.

SUMMER SALAD ACCOMPANIMENTS

Bread sticks and Melba toast are a crispy flavorsome pair which give taste and texture contrast to a salad luncheon.

Thinly sliced bread, spread with cheese and rolled makes dainty tidbits to serve with fruit or vegetable salads. Toast the tips just before serving and bring them to the table hot.

Poppy seed sticks are good with tossed vegetable salad. Brush strips of bread with melted butter [illegible] with poppy seeds, and toast. Serve hot.

French dressing is also [illegible] with fruit salads. Cream cheese balls rolled in finely chopped nuts and served with crisp crackers [illegible] accompaniment.

THE Runaway

by KATHLEEN NORRIS

"But, Becky, you will not do anything suddenly? You will not run off?" asked her mother.

GAVIN wrote her immediately, a letter she kissed and wet with her happy tears. It was brief, but no longer letter could have said more to her hungry heart. Rebecca read:

My Darling:

Here goes for the Big Adventure. This adventure that ends and begins with you. On the train from San Jose I met Lou Kerrigan, so pleased to see you're truly on. I was to see him. He's trying to put something over in San Francisco, and here we are! No more now. I'm late, but this is just to let you know that everything seems to be shaping well. "Yours truly" Sweetheart, I'm a lot more than that! I'm yours completely, eternally, adoringly. Gavin.

The address was of a San Francisco hotel. He was not so very far away after all! In three or four hours she might be with him. It unsatisfied Rebecca to think of it. She slept with the note in her hand, pressed against her cheek.

& TALK

Becky," her mother said to her quietly on a hot Saturday afternoon, "sit down a minute, dear. I want to talk to you." The tone was just Sarah's ordinary tone; perhaps even a little calmer than usual. But Becky knew instantly that she was lost.

"Becky," Sarah said. "I want to know what's been going on between you and that Kittle or [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

"You haven't been writing to that fellow?" Sarah asked, her eyes dark with pain and apprehension.

"Ever since he went away, when I've an address," Becky answered cheerfully, "I'm sorry, Mother," she went on with real feeling, "and I'm sorry to have kept it from you. I've hated it, really I have, on your account, and on Joe's, of course. Joe and I are engaged, in a way—"

"In a way!" her mother took her up instantly. "How do you mean, 'in a way'? You don't mean to tell me . . . you can't mean . . . What on earth does Joe think of this fine state of affairs?"

"Joe doesn't know; nobody knows. It's an absolute secret between Gavin and me. And, Mother," Becky continued, gaining courage as she went along, "it just - happened. The big hawk lit, as Gavin said. He cared for me and I cared for him at first sight, that Sunday when I was up at Ferrattas'.

"He's getting started now in San Francisco, and as soon as he's ready I'm to go down and marry him."

Sarah had remained immobile, looking steadily at Becky. Color had drained from the older woman's fair handsome face. She said harshly, "He's getting started, is he? How old is he? Forty?"

TO SETTLE DOWN

Thirty one!" Becky answered, laughing over deep secret hurt.

"And he's just getting started?"

"He's done all kinds of things. He's lived everywhere. London, Mexico, New York. Now he's going to settle down."

"You don't know anything about him."

"I know enough." Becky spoke firmly, conscious only of relief after strain. Mother knew, and the skies had not fallen!

"Becky . . . my darling . . ." Sarah sat down with an air of hopeless surrender. "No, dear, you can't do this," she said gently.

"Oh, Mother, but don't you see . . ." Rebecca left the sentence unfinished. "After all, I'm nineteen," she offered mildly.

"That has nothing to do with it!" Sarah said in an absent undertone, [illegible] It would be madness there's Joe and all the Ferrattas to think of . . . old friends of ours. You couldn't throw away [illegible] and the boys and your friends here. You wouldn't!"

There was a hostility, a lack of sympathy in her mother's manner that was entirely new to Becky.

I know I'm talking as if I didn't know how you felt, Beck," Sarah presently said in a softer tone, laying a hand on hers. "I'm sorry, dear. But if you do this you'll [illegible] as long as you live. It won't be man, Becky. We don't know him of course. But it's not that.

It's that well that things that don't count with you now will be so much more important in a little while. Home and your old friends and [illegible] you didn't run away from [illegible]

You can't look ahead now, you can't see what life really is. There might be a child —"

"I've thought of that!" Becky said, as her mother paused. "I want a child some day; I adore children."

SORRY

Her mother hesitated for a long time, started to speak, thought better of it and sat staring at her again.

"I'm sorry, Mother," Becky said sullenly, stubbornly, in the silence.

Sarah made no answer, once she sighed heavily. "Becky," she said suddenly, "when were you going to tell dad and me?"

"Oh, I suppose when Gavin wrote that he had something definite," Becky said after a moment.

"And Joe then, too?"

"I suppose so."

Sarah sat down again, close to her daughter, and laid a persuasive hand on her arm.

"Becky," she said, "suppose you knew that this was going to mean unhappiness for you, poverty perhaps, loneliness, responsibility such as you've never known? Suppose it mean losing faith in your man, not knowing which way to turn —"

Again she interrupted herself and stopped, leaving the sentence in air. Rebecca, looking at her seriously, answered the question with another: "Mother, why don't you like Gavin?"

"I well, we saw him just that one time. I don know him," Sarah parried.

"If it meant all that (but it won't)," Beck said, "still I'd go. I'd have to go. But to me it means something different," she went on with a dreamy half smile; "it means that my whole life won't be spent in Salletts.

"It means meeting people I don't know now, holding my own, finding my place! I could make a success of any marriage, Mother," Becky went on.

"I could marry the white headed Poteet boy and make a success of it! I could go down in Factory Town and take one of those awful cottages with the gate hanging on [illegible] and the floor all splinters, and I could paint it and plant trees and have a supper table in the back yard and make it lovely!

"You know me. I like changing things, working them out! If I married Joe . . . never would have anything more serious than icebox cakes to think about, and whether my slip showed! Marrying Gavin, I'll have something to do—helping him and, helping myself at the same time!"

WON'T RUN AWAY

"Icebox cakes aren't exciting maybe, to a girl your age," Sarah persisted, "but they're pleasanter than not having the rent, than having your husband drink and your little girl sick!"

"Gavin doesn't drink!"

"Not at all?" Sarah diverged to ask, surprised.

"Well, I wouldn't say that. I don't know, but I mean——"

"Exactly; you don't know," the older woman put in adroitly. She suddenly changed her manner and her tactics; her voice was loving, pleading.

"Beck dear, you'll not do anything suddenly? You'll not just run off?"

Becky was hard pressed. Her face grew red, and her mother divined instantly that she had planned something of the sort. There was a silence while the two looked at each other.

"Promise me, darling. You know we couldn't stop you. But after all these years—when you've been my only girl . . ."

"I'll just . . ." Becky altered the phrase: "To tell you would just make it harder to go," she offered.

"Truly it won't! Truly, dear Promise me!"

So there was her deep laid plan gone flat!

Two days later Sarah opened fire again. This time it was night. The boys and their father had gone to bed. Becky and her mother had lingered on, on the porch alone, under a bright white moon, breathing in the cool air that relieved the burning tension of the day.

Joe had come in earlier in the evening, half asleep from a day spent in research for the Chet Dark case. Now he was gone. Becky turned an amazed face toward her mother as Sarah said quietly, "Would you be very much surprised to hear that daddy isn't your father, Beck?"

A silence of utter stupefaction on Becky's part held the porch for a full minute. The earth seemed to take a great jar under her.

"That surprises you, doesn't it?" Sarah faltered on. "I had to tell you, my dear. We've talked over some plans, daddy and I, and we think it best you should - should know. Gavin Flood has brought a new element into it. If you'd gone on and married Joe, I think we might have told you. Dad might have told you only that you weren't [illegible]

"You were married twice, Mother?" Becky's voice was frightened.

"No, only once, Beck. I knew your mother, although I didn't know much about her, or even her name. That is I'm not sure I knew her name. She——"

"Mother," Becky interrupted almost angrily, "you're fooling!"

"I wish I were fooling," Sarah said.

"Go on," Becky said.

"I'll have to go back some way, then, Beck, to tell you how it was I met your mother. I was working in one of Chicago's big department stores; I was about 25. My parents were dead. I'd met dad, and we wanted to be married. But we had no money, and it seemed as if we must wait forever.

"One day in November I noticed a lady standing quietly watching me for quite some time. When I was free she came up and bought some book, and we stood talking. She was handsomely dressed, but she looked sad and sick. She was going to have a baby very soon."

"Not married!" Beck said quickly.

Will this revelation of Becky's mysterious parentage affect her determination to marry Gavin? Don't miss tomorrow's absorbing chapter.

AUSTEN LAKE

Westward Whoa; Sox on to St. Louis

CHICAGO, Ill., July 20—The Red Sox bogged down and lost a pair of ball games to the White Sox and compared with the superlative dash of previous games they moved around like a set of PWA workers with nothing to do and plenty of leisure in which to do it. The inertia was terrific, and after a while even the partisan Chicago crowd quit watching the sport and devoted their attention to the steel workers who were rigging a lighting system on the roof of the grandstand. A painter dangled by his armpits and smeared aluminum icing on a tower, dropping his bucket in the process. The crowd laughed! An inebriate, much the better for his drams, teetered on the front box pipe rails, miraculously keeping his bandy-legged balance until a limb of the law hauled him down. The crowd laughed.

AUSTEN LAKE

A stout cop chased a bevy of kids along the left field wall. The crowd laughed! A stout lady, carrying the evening groceries, tumbled down a flight of stairs. A spectator left a portion of his pants on a seat-handle while recovering a foul ball. And that was about all . . .

All except the seven innings of the second game when the journalists were thumbing their record books in anticipation of a no-hit-no-run game for John Dungan Rigney.

It was all that kept the people in the ball park. [illegible] pole. Smudges of smoke [illegible] plume.

But in the eighth when Joe Cronin spanked a clean single into center, the entire population rose let off a hornet hum of hate at Joseph for spoiling a perfect game, and tramped toward the ramps. That rare museum curio, the no-hitter, had been ruined. Why wait for the rest?

Our boys just lacked vitamin C, the energy atom. Maybe they hadn't eaten their spinach. At any rate they drooled through their chores.

They hoo-hooed with their bats. They tipped their caps to [illegible] grounders. The let-down after twelve straight innings had left them limp and it looked as though Cronin would have to send for the Marines to get the White Sox out.

It was a combination lethargy in which the Sox couldn't hit the opposing pitching and the pitchers couldn't keep the opposing hitters from hitting them. So our portion for eighteen innings and five hours of effort was one run, a disputed homer by Jimmy Foxx in the sixth inning of the first game.

Injury Jinx Hot on Cronin's Trail

Cronin dug around under the towels, spare shirts and rubbish on the bench and located Jake Wade to do the initial job of pitching. He had pretty well run out of this week's stock of pitchers and was dipping into next week's rations. So Wade went in and, truth to tell, did a fairish job. But the Red Sox corns hurt! Summer's molten sunshine flooded their veins! They just took languid pokes at the ball like your sister Susie patting the family puppy.

Even our Joe, in his new cantankerous character, felt the torpor. Only once did he rouse himself when Umpire Bill Summers ruled a runner safe after Joe had tagged him out by the width of Michigan Boulevard. And then he jumped [illegible] a fist and laid his chin [illegible] a prison lockstep as the [illegible] turned around and frightened Joe out with his face.

And once Joe knocked himself out with his own foul tip, a ball that bounced off a sensitive portion of his anatomy so that he [illegible] down on his knees like a [illegible] It was the fourth time in a week that our Joe has taken the count from (1) being hit on the temple in Cleveland, (2) being thumped in the stomach in Detroit, (3) being hutted on the jaw in Chicago. In fact he wears a purplish bruise on his forehead and front of his mouth is lacerated and puffed.

So after losing the first game 4 to 1, the Sox went in for a change of laundry, a cool suck of something and a few testy words by the boss. But it didn't help! When they came out, Johnny Rigney began drilling the plate like a dentist filling a cavity with a gold inlay.

Fritz Ostermuller the Red Sox nominee came apart in the fifth when Jimmy Tabor lost a ground ball in the slack of his blouse and he began a frantic search for it like a man with a lizard loose in his tailoring.

He finally located it in the region of his liver and made a frantic chuck toward first. It wasn't Fritz's fault, but Joe came in and gave him a papa pat on the pants and sent him away to spare him further humiliation. He brought his kid pitcher, Chick Sayles, in to take a lesson. He did!

It's perfectly vulgar about it, the club hasn't much pennant [illegible] until it adds at least two more Grade A pitchers. But where [illegible] broad realm can they lasso two top ranking pitchers? Even Tom Yawkey's bankroll thick as it is can't buy them.

JITTERS HIT RED SOX AFTER VICTORY SPREE

By JOE CASHMAN

CHICAGO, July 20—The Windy City has certainly cooled off our Red Sox. Catching the Yanks their only concern when they pulled into this town Tuesday morning, the Croninmen's major problem now, after dropping three decisions in the past two afternoons to the White Sox, is to stay ahead of the third-place natives, who are [illegible] but 4½ games below.

International News Photograph

FUTURE MAGNATE—Upon the shoulders of Charles Comiskey II, photographed here in a happier moment, falls the responsibility of carrying on the name of Comiskey, famous in baseball. The young man, now 13, one day will succeed his father and his grand father as head of the White Sox.

Jake Wade hurled his first ball of the year in yesterday's opener. Freddie Ostermueller has won with less stuff than he flashed before he was chased in the fifth inning of the afternoon.

The Croninmen were walloped

Durocher Fined $50; Wyatt $25

NEW YORK, July 20 (AP)—Leo Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was fined $50 and pitcher Whitlow Wyatt $25 today by President Ford Frick of the National League for their altercations with the umpires in last night's game with the Cincinnati Reds.

Durocher was thumbed out of the game after disputing a decision of Umpire Jocko Conlan at second base.

Later in the game Wyatt tried to take a punch at Stark, but was prevented by teammates after the [illegible]

"They are attributed to envy, sour grapes, and old Inferiority Complex.

But when one who has achieved fame and fortune gives Lady Luck [illegible] he's worth hearing.

Jack Dempsey is a great believer in luck. He doesn't think you can change it by carrying a rabbit's foot or tapping on wood. But he thinks [illegible] can.

"Jack, what about the element of luck in your own career?" He said:

"Kid, it's been full of. In the first place, if I hadn't met Jack Kearns, which was luck, I'd never have been champion. I had twelve other managers and they couldn't make anything out of me. But even afterward we had to have the right breaks, and I'm going to tell you about the closest break we ever had.

"I licked Willard in Toledo in 1919, but I figure I won the world championship standing barefoot and with one ear frozen, listening outside a bedroom door in the gas-lighted hall of a little dump of a cheap hotel back in Buffalo in the winter of 1917.

"It's the only time I've ever listened outside a door, and it was pure luck that did it that time, but I'm glad I did it.

FIRST STEP UPWARD

"Here's the way it happens. I It was during the time that John the Barber and a lot of preachers and governors had boxing on the brink. Big fights were hard to get. Kearns had taught me to fight, but I was a gangling kid of 22, weighing under 170 and looking as if I weighed less, and nobody except Jack Kearns had ever thought me as a possible heavyweight topnotcher.

"Charlie Murray, one of the best fight promoters in the East, had booked Carl Morris for a bout at the Queensbury Club in Buffalo. He was going to have Flynn fight him, but I had smashed Flynn out West, and Murray, who had never laid eyes on me either in or outside the ring, got the notion that I might fight Morris.

"Maybe you remember that Carl Morris was a giant. He weighed around 250 pounds and stood six feet four, and he was tough as leather, a hard slugger with a reach of 80 inches and a rough fighter if there ever was one. I don't mean to be touting myself, but you have to know that to understand the story.

"Kearns and I were laying low in a town near Chicago when Murray got us over the long distance telephone. Of course Doc Kearns did the talking. I could tell by Doc's cagey answers that Murray was asking about my size. He said:

"How big? Weight? Sure he's a heavyweight, a great big guy, a big heavyweight."

"But he wouldn't give Murray any figures. Kearns knew what was up, and before we started East he made me buy a suit with big padded shoulders and get a shoemaker to put about a half inch more of leather on the heels of my shoes.

GOOD MONEY GONE

"We got to Buffalo on a blizzard night and went to a little hotel, planning to go and see Murray in the morning. It was on the way that I got an ear frozen.

"Well, Charlie Murray fooled us, and the money spent on padded shoulders and paid to the shoemaker was lost money. About ten o'clock that night I had all my clothes off except my B. V. D.'s and was lying on the bed, half dozing, without having crawled under the covers, waiting for Doc to undress, when there was a tap on the door.

"Doc, all unsuspecting, said, 'Come in,' and it was Charlie Murray come to look me over. But I didn't know it was Charlie Murray, and I just lay there like a simp.

"Charlie told me afterwards that he thought I was a rubber or some other hanger-on. His eyes didn't even stop moving when they lit on me, not for more than a second, and then he looked all around the little room and said to Doc

"'Well, where's this heavyweight of yours?'

"Kearns put the best face on it he could. He said: 'Why, there he is. Jack, get up and shake hands with Mr. Murray.'"

SOME KID, JACK

"I jumped up and stood on my toes and swelled out my chest, but I could tell that he was sore and that I wasn't fooling him at all.

"Murray was sore as a pup.

"They talked on for a bit and then Murray whispered to Kearns, and they asked me to go out in the hall for a couple of minutes, and I threw on a bathrobe and went—and I started to walk away from the door—and it

Jack Dempsey, ex-heavyweight champion of the world, gets a warm welcome from his daughters, Joan, left, and Barbara, as he returns home after convalescing from an appendicitis operation. Jack took a walk around the block with the aid of a cane and then called a halt to all further roadwork for the day. His daughters have inscribed their welcome to daddy on the blackboard of their playroom.

Thankful For Shot At Morris

I had I don't believe I'd be champion today. It was luck, pure luck, that I glued my ear to the keyhole instead

"And I heard Murray saying: 'It's impossible! It can't be done. I'd get myself arrested. It would queer the fight game in Buffalo. It would be a crime. Morris would either kill him, or it would be like a child boxing a man. They don't want to pay to see a boy spanked. It's o-[illegible]

TEARS OF YOUTH

Well, when Murray came out of the door, I guess I gave him more reason for thinking I was a kid or a child, for I was crying, crying like a fool kid, with tears streaming down my cheeks. I couldn't help it and he knew by the sound of my voice and tried to say something friendly.

"I can't tell you exactly what I said to him, but I took hold of his coat and held on to him and kept saying:

"'Please, please let me fight him; I've got to fight him. I've got to have this chance. I can lick him. I've got to do it. You don't even have to pay me. You can keep your $750 and I'll fight him for nothing.'

"All of a sudden, while I was yapping like that and pulling at his coat, and almost getting down on my knees to him, Murray said:

"'You do believe you can do it, and I'm going to give you your chance.'

"I tell you, no matter how good a man is, he's got to have luck, he's got to have his chance, and it was my luck that Charlie Murray give me mine."

The story of how Jack Dempsey, two nights later, tore into [illegible] Carl Morris like a tiger and literally cut him to pieces has to place [illegible]

Dempsey later went on to knock out Willard, Carpentier and Firpo, and gained a rating as one of the greatest champions of all time.

Helen Pedersen Defeated By Unseeded Mary Arnold

An upset of major proportions took place in the women's singles at Longwood today when Helen Pedersen of Stamford, Conn., seeded No. 1 in the tournament and ranked No. 8 nationally, was eliminated in a quarter-final match by the unknown, unseeded Mary Arnold of California.

The scores were 5—7, 6—3, 6—1.

Miss Arnold, a beautiful 23-year-old playground instructor, is making her first trip east. She has had no previous tournament experience.

Another favorite left the ranks today when Virginia Wolfenden of San Francisco, seeded No. 2 in the tournament and ranked No. 9 nationally, was put out by Patricia Betz of Almeda, Cal. The scores were 6—3, 6—2.

Miss Wolfenden was a finalist in the tournament last year, bowing to Helen Bernhard.

Katherine Winthrop of Boston, only local hope left in the play, gained a semi-final bracket by defeating Pat Canning of California 7—5, 5—7, 6—2 today.

Miss Winthrop displayed marvelous tennis. Continuation of such play will advance her in the finals.

Helen Bernhard of New York, last year's winner, gained the remaining bracket by coming from behind and defeating Barbara Bradley of Los Angeles, 8-10, 8-6, 6-2, after a three hours' battle.

Miss Bernhard will meet Miss Betz, and Miss Winthrop will engage Miss Arnold for finalist berths tomorrow.

In a quarter-final match of the womens doubles, Patricia Cummings of Westfield, N. J., and Florence Leboutellier of Long Island defeated Mrs. Katherine Sample of Miami, Fla., and Cecilia Riegel of Philadelphia, 6—2, 2—6, 6—4.

Top seeded in the mixed doubles list, Mrs. Virginia Johnson of Boston and Jack Crawford of Australia advanced to the quarter-finals by disposing of Mrs. E. R. Naas of Boston and Lyman Olmstead of Cambridge, 6—0, 6—0.

WOMEN'S QUARTER-FINAL SINGLES

Pauline Betz, Los Angeles, defeated Virginia Wolfenden, San Francisco, 6—3, 6—2.

Mary Arnold, Los Angeles, defeated Helen Pedersen, Stamford, Ct., 5—7, 6—3, 6—1.

Katherine Winthrop, Boston, defeated Patricia Canning, San Francisco, 7—5, 5—7, 6—2.

Helen Bernhard, New York, defeated Barbara Bradley, Los Angeles, 8—10, 8—6, 6—2.

Reds Lose Craft; Has Sore Throat

NEW YORK, July 20 (AP)—Harry Craft, outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, will rest for a few days until he recovers from a sore throat, Manager Bill McKechnie revealed today.

A physician lanced one of Craft's tonsils yesterday and he did not play against Brooklyn last night. Stanley Bordagaray will substitute for him.

McCarthy's 74 Best In Shenecossett Golf

EASTERN POINT, Conn., July 20 (AP)—Morton McCarthy of Norfolk, Va., today posted a 35—39—74, two over par, to take the early lead in the qualifying round of the 20th annual Shenecossett Men's Invitation tournament.

A stroke behind, with 39—36—75, was Dom Socconi of New Britain, defender of the Marston-Shenecossett trophy.

Delicious, too, is the tangy flavor of hops in ale and beer, but Seedless Hops impart even a finer, more enjoyable taste. That's why expensive SEEDLESS HOPS are used in brewing Narragansett.

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

I BELIEVE I established some kind if a new record when I bet on nine straight losers at Wonderland Park. It is possible that you may have equalled or surpassed this mark, but if you did you did not have the figures on the dogs compiled by the track's Grover Whalen, to wit, Young Happy.

Upon my arrival at Wonderland Park, I was greeted profusely by Young Happy who immediately called for my program.

"I know you don't know anything about dogs," said the good will man, "and so I asked the best dog handicapper in the country to give me a set of figures for you."

I confessed to Young Happy that my knowledge of dogs was limited to a beagle we have at our place in Scituate. A beagle is a hunting dog, and is not helpful in judging the running ability of greyhounds.

In the past when I have visited dog tracks, I have always discarded the first three betting choices, and backed the price dogs. On occasions I have picked two or three outside dogs to win, and then hoped that the top choices fell down or ran off the track.

One night at New Orleans I wagered on a long shot in a hurdle race that fell down clearing one of the hurdles, and then picked himself up to come on and win.

At George Carter's Miami Beach Kennel track I never played a dog that paid less than 5 to 1.

Despite this background, I accepted "Young" Happy's figures. The figure dog usually ended up a favorite or a second choice, and then either got boxed or insisted upon rolling around with other dogs while rounding corners.

I will say that Young Happy's selections kept trying right up to the finish even when there were seven other dogs ahead of them. Unfortunately the mutuel department doesn't give any rating to courage and fighting spirit.

Mutuel Handle Will Be $1,000,000 Up

GEORGE FUNK, president of the Bay State Greyhound Association, told me that the mutuel handle for the meeting that closes on Saturday night will be $1,000,000 up over the same number of racing nights of a year ago.

"Our high was $207,000 on a Saturday night, while we have had numerous nights where the mutuel handle has bobbed through the $190,000 mark," remarked Funk. "I think the public understands dog racing more than it formerly did. It realizes the dogs are always trying to win, and that they are bred and cared for as carefully as the thoroughbred race horses.

"I think Rural Rube has almost human intelligence. Great dogs like Rural Rube attract people to dog racing. For any sport to succeed the public must become interested in the contestants rather than in the commercial end of the sport."

"I shall always consider Rickard as the greatest of promoters," declared Funk. "He had the happy faculty of building up interest in the contender. When Tex first started to talk about Gene Tunney as an opponent for Jack Dempsey, people laughed at him.

"Rickard continued to talk Tunney until he ballyhooed the match into a $1,800,000 gate in Philadelphia. Tex saw Tunney win, which was a disappointment to him despite his pre-bout statements, as he had great personal fondness for Dempsey."

Wonderland Park has been dressed up since my previous visit. There is a special stand for the band near the head of the home stretch, and green trees along the backstretch.

The Old Harbor Club will take over Wonderland Park under the direction of Sheldon Fairbanks on next Monday night, and continue dog racing until the middle of August when, under the Massachusetts law, all forms of racing other than that held at the Fairs must be suspended until October.

Young Happy remarked that with so many nights of dog racing ahead he will be able to give me some winners. I told him I am going back to my old system of playing the long shots. I at least never came up with nine losers in a row when following this system.

Yanks at 4 to 5

The showing of the Yanks in the West has caused me to make them a 4 to 5 favorite in my book to win the American league pennan. I believe Joe McCarthy has succeeded in rallying his club, and that with a few breaks New York will be in the world's series in October.

In the National League, I am giving odds of 7 to 5 with the Reds favorites. Newspaper Row.

West's fielding has improved, while for a big fellow he is moving around in lively style.

Phil Dudley, Worcester.

Stop Those Yanks!

The Red Sox will have to get some help from other American League clubs if they are to succeed in stopping the Yanks. Cleveland certainly showed an inferiority complex against the world's champion. Let the battle cry of the American League be "Stop Those Yanks!" Cronin Booster.

Random Shots at Target

JACK KENNEY, Circulation Director of the Hearst Detroit Times, is in Boston on vacation . . . Jack says Detroit is much steamed up over the Louis-Pastor bout that takes place in September.

"Pastor made a fine showing as he won from Roscoe Toles in Detroit," said Kenney . . . "Toles is one of the best of the new crop of heavyweights, and many persons figured he would win from Pastor . . . Bob carried the fight to his opponent, and had a comfortable margin in his favor at the finish.

Dave Wilson Clicks With Six Winners at Suffolk

Unleashing a terrific spurt, Dave Wilson, ace of New England race handicappers, added six winners to his already imposing list that has carried him to the fore in the win column for the Suffolk Downs meeting.

The Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser bangtail wizard started off his sextet of winners with Tenacious in the second heat.

Tenacious, Dave's best bet, paid $5.00 even and copped first place with plenty to spare.

It was two in a row for King Wilson when Late Pass took the third event at $10.20, $4.80 and $3.20 across the board.

Blue Marvel, backed into even money favoritism, ran like an odds-on choice to take the third canto at $4.00.

Although moving up in company, Dan Cupid got a skyfull of chalk figures under the Wilson system and had little trouble annexing the sixth race. Dan Cupid paid $8.40 straight.

DAVE WILSON

Lady Genie won the seventh heat and returned $8.80 for every $2.00 win ticket. Wantarun wanted to run and did, to win the nightcap final and complete a banner day for Dave Wilson. Wantarun paid $7.80 on the nose.

For several years Dave Wilson has easily outpaced all other local handicappers and is well on his way to repeat that feat.

Dave Wilson's up-to-the-minute comments and graded handicaps appear only in the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

B'S 3½ GAMES BACK OF 2D PLACE CARDS

By BILL GRIMES

"I'll send out 'Barnacle' Bill Posedel, our ex-U. S. gob, to scuttle those Cubs today," advised Manager Casey Stengel this morning, as he looked up from rummaging through his mail at National League Field. "And if the Pirates hang another defeat on the Giants and the poor Phillies should make a miscue and knock off the Cards, six of the eight contenders for the National League flag will all be within hand shaking distance of each other in the standing.

"We gave the Cubs the old heave ho out of second place yesterday and St. Louis is now in the runner up berth," continued Case, who apparently had studied the standing before he reached the ball park.

"I've been harping on the subject of the Bees finishing in the big money so much this season that I've just about worn the point off that old needle. But, just take a look-see at that standing this morning.

"Would you bet that the Bees or any other club that it but three and one half games out of SECOND place is out of the running?

REDS HAVE 8 GAME LEAD

"Not if you're in your right mind.

"I'll have to admit that the Reds are slipping a little too far out in front to suit my taste. At this stage of the race, they have an eight game lead over the Cards. That's a nice lead but with two months to go, it doesn't insure them of the pennant. They may bump into some injuries, for I've noticed that of late, the boys are throwing blocks going into bases and if Billy Myers or Junie Frey get a trifle careless and neglect to duck out of the path of some base runner, the Reds will come back to the rest of us with tears in their eyes."

"There are only two games scheduled for the National League today. The Dodgers, Reds, Phillies and Cards are laying off after playing last night. We can move up a half game by taking another from the Cubs and I hope that we'll be over the .500 mark when we start West on Monday.

MAJESKI INJURY KICKS UP

"Henry Majeski is having more trouble with that stone bruise on his left foot. That injury has handicapped the boy all season and I can't see that he's going to be in shape this season. I'm going to give him a few more days off and see if he's able to move around a little more. Al Simmons cannot run, so he tells me, and he'll be out for a few more days.

"I should think that it was about time that some of the scribes gave Maxie West a tumble. You saw him when he reported to us a year ago at Bradenton. He wasn't very impressive, being awkward, a slow starter and unable to throw.

"I saw that boy on the Coast for a couple of years. He was a third baseman when I first looked him over. I knew he'd never become a major league infielder, but I realized that he possessed plenty of power and that he had an abundance of courage. If I didn't know that Maxie was game to the core, the chances are that I'd have cut him loose, or at least farmed him out, before he broke camp a year ago.

WEST COURAGEOUS

"Max West is the most improved ball player in either major league. He's a fine fielder today, thanks to Johnny Cooney, and he knows how to throw, for which he can thank George Kelly. A year ago West couldn't cover as much ground as a lady's handkerchief. Today he gallops all over the field pulling down drives with the nonchalance of a Tris Speaker. And he'll always give you that old college try. Fence don't mean a thing to Maxie when he's chasing a fly ball, and moreover, now, he seldom throws to the wrong base.

"And, do you know that West is playing with a very sore left hand. He has some grissle under the webbing between his left thumb and forefinger. It feels something like a small bone. Some weeks ago, I suggested to him that he submit to an operation but he refused to take my advice. He declared that by using a sponge he was able to get some of the shock off the sore spot and that he believed that he could keep on playing until the close of the season, when he would have his hand opened up and the growth, or whatever it is removed.

"Now, probably you can understand why I've always had faith in Max. Any player, who agrees to stay with you in the face of as painful an injury as West has, is 'tops' with me. And, I'll go a long way for that boy. He's all right, I wish I had a few more like him and then I'd know that we'd finish up in that four figure position."

twice mainly because they weren't hitting.

A home run by Jimmy Foxx, in the sixth inning of the opener, was the only run they could fashion in 18 chapters.

Jack Knott limited them to seven safeties in the opener. He did give them opportunities to win, but they couldn't take advantage of them.

In the nightcap they narrowly missed being held hitless while being turned back runless by Johnny Rigney. It wasn't until the eighth inning that they made the first of four singles.

No, indeed, it wasn't entirely the Boston boxmen's fault.

Nor, in our opinion, the fault of too many doubleheaders.

The Red Sox, as we look at it, are merely suffering from the reaction experienced by almost every club that has ever unreeled an unusually long winning streak.

WINNING SURGE HARMFULL

Straight victory surges are great while they last but, almost without exception, immediately they are ended, a tail-spin follows.

That's the answer to the Red Sox losing four out of five since their 12-game streak was stopped in Detroit, not pitching or doubleheaders.

The lads are bound to pull themselves together again in the near future and resume their winning ways, twin-bills or not.

But, while that should happen before their hold on second place is threatened, it begins to look as though the rejuvenation would come too late to spell a pennant, unless the Yanks should obligingly fall into another slump.

Roller Football Game on Tuesday

The nation's newest sports thriller, "roller football," hits Boston next Tuesday night when the Boston Aces inaugurate the game at National League Field against the colorful New York White Sox.

Tackling and blocking at top speed on skates is a stunt that must be handled perfectly or bad injuries are brought about.

SWEEPSTAKE CHIEF PRAISES WILSON

Jack O'Sheahan of Dublin, Ireland, director of the famous Irish sweepstakes conducted for hospital funds, is a visitor to Boston.

O'Sheahan attended the races at Suffolk Downs. He rode to victory with Dave Wilson, who had six winners.

"This man Wilson is the most wonderful handicapper I ever heard of," declared O'Sheahan. "Think of anybody picking six winners in one day. Playing Wilson's choices, I covered the expenses of my Boston visit."

O'Sheahan declared that since 1930 the Irish sweepstakes had paid out $230,000,000 in prizes, and turned over $70,000,00 to hospitals.

"The expenses of the promotion is 13½ per cent," said O'Sheahan. "Under the law we could take as high as 30 per cent, but we find that 13½ per cent is sufficient to pay the expenses of management and of the many details of such a big sweepstakes.

The hayburner was being transported by truck (above) on Portland street when he tried to rise, stuck a hoof through the floor, perilously close to a wheel. Fears that he had broken a leg and would have to be destroyed were unfounded. He lives to work some more.
